B-KOO Inspiration

Hong Kong's first-ever homebuilt aircraft to navigate the globe

(28th August 2016, Hong Kong) B-KOO Inspiration, Hong Kong's first-ever homebuilt aircraft took off today from the Hong Kong International Airport for a 3-month journey of a total of 55,000 km across 50 airports in 25 countries.

To prepare for B-KOO Inspiration's, round-the-world trip, the Hong Kong Business Aviation Centre Limited (HKBAC) had worked closely with Captain Hank CHENG, the pilot of B-KOO Inspiration, and his team to plan the ground support and facilitated him and his Flight Engineer Gary TAT with one-stop Custom, Immigration and Quarantine (CIQ) services. Captain Hank also shared the concept behind this amazing plan with HKBAC.

“We are privileged to be part of this proud achievement in Hong Kong's aviation industry, working shoulder-to-shoulder with different stakeholders to pursue the B-KOO Inspiration dream: a perfect showcase of Hong Kong's can-do spirit,” said Madonna FUNG, General Manager of HKBAC.

Hank expressed gratitude towards HKBAC's support. He said, ‘B-KOO Inspiration represents the aspiration of those who love aviation. We feel the passion of our younger generation in this and hope to soar higher with them.’
