The team from HKBAC's took a photo with Captain Hank CHENG and Flight Engineer Gary TAT to commemorate the return.

(13th November 2016, Hong Kong) B-KOO Inspiration, Hong Kong's first-ever homebuilt aircraft, touched down gloriously at the Hong Kong International Airport today after successfully completing a 3-month round-the-world journey of a total of 50,000 km in 25 countries, including Australia, The United States and Italy.

To prepare for B-KOO Inspiration's return trip, the Hong Kong Business Aviation Centre (HKBAC) provided meticulous ground support and facilitated Captain Hank CHENG and his Flight Engineer Gary TAT with one-stop Custom, Immigration and Quarantine (CIQ) services. "I would like to congratulate Hank and Gary's marvelous return. We are proud to be part of this remarkable milestone for Hong Kong as we share in B-KOO Inspiration's dream, which is a perfect show case of Hong Kong's can-do spirit and perseverance," said Madonna Fung, General Manager, HKBAC.

Hank expressed gratitude towards HKBAC's support. He glowed with excitement as he recounted his journey, "We literally left our footprints around the globe and enjoyed a kaleidoscope of different cultures by embarking on this amazing flight. We looking forward to continuously working shoulder-to-shoulder with our young generation in future in pursuit of other aviation dreams." Gary added, "The 'intimate' journey with Hank underlines the importance of team work. With collaborative and concerted efforts, we can tackle all sorts of difficulties and reach out to our dreams. "
